For the Leader, ["What is that, mother ?"]

Who is that, Columbia?

Cobb, my son!

To find him out I have just begun.
A traitor's blood flows free in his veins,
And he's hurrying off with his ill got gains,
And a carse on his lips for this Union dear,
To warble it out into Georgia's ear.

Take warning, my child, in your young days,
Or like him you may meet with a traitor's prais

Who is that, Columbia?

And that gruff voice like a madman wild,
And the venomous slang he is uttering forth
will find a rebuke in the slumbering North,
For as I have off heen told of orst,
"When the poi bolls over the scum goes first."
Never be like him, the despised of earth,
But he true to your country, and fand of you

Who is that, Columbia!

Floyd, my boy!

He played the part of the Southerners' toy,

Flrm on the cause of rebellion relying,

Cursing the Union, his country defying!

His eye to the South and his heart with the cause

He cared not for the Bullon, it flag, nor its laws

Boy, may Floyd's course never be thine.

But be honest, and faithful, and true to thy line

Who is that, Columbia? Old Buck, my love He'll soon pass home to his native grove;
No sympathy now, no friend is nigh;
He'll soon pass off by himself to die;
bhams darkens his eys, and remorse to him brings
Yet the poorest way is the last he sings.
Live so, my love, that when death shall come
Unlike him you may go to your last long home.

A ROMANTIC NARRATIVE .- A man by th name of Kimball, accompanied by his wife, the 29th. came in on a Toledo freight train on Saturday last, on his way eastward. They essert that from 1848 to 1859 they were held in captivity by a tribe of the Snake Indians om whom they managed to effect an escape a year and a half ago. They were originally from Syracuse, which place they left in company with a party of sixty-three who were going overland to California. On the plains, the train was attacked by a large body of Indians, and after a protracted defence all but thirteen of the sixty-three were slain among whom were several sisters and brothers of Mr. and Mrs. Kimball. The surviv ors were made prisoners, and a council of war being held, they were compelled to run the gauntlet for their lives. Kimball ran twice; once for himself and again for his wife. Mrs. Kimball's father, an old man, not having sufficient strength and agility to Lincoln will pass through this city on his swoid the blows aimed at him, was, after a few steps, knocked down, and immediately carried to the stake, his flesh being stuck full of pine splinters, and was rousted alive before the eyes of his horror stricken dangh-

> Kimball and his wife were carried away by their captors, and in process of time, he became a man of considerable rank among them and took part in their hunts and war expeditions, but still was continually nursing plans of escape.

During the eleven years which he spent Thompson's Reporter for February 1st, are with the Indians, four children were born to him, and with all of these and his wife he The Congregational Church and Society of Brooklyn Center hold a Festival the savages, and set forth on the long and attend. DAYRINS' WATER DRAWER .- It is one of the most convenient and efficient inventions for drawing water, from wells of any depth, that we ever saw. The water is drawn with ease in an oak bucket, by means of a small windless and newly invented wrought iron chain, that entirely obviates the accumulation of ice, similar to what is often experienced when using a rope. The bucket is filled from the bottom, through a substantial valve, as it decends into the water, and shuts as you commence to elevate it. On coming up, an iron rod attached to the valve strikes the top of the curb, forcing the valve open without turning or tipping the bucket, but discharging the water handsomely into a spout, under which a pail receives it for

The whole process of this valuable invention is free from complicated machinery .-This water drawer occupies but a small pace, and when properly put up looks well. We speak from practiced experience, having tested its good qualities. When once in use on premises, it will appear strange how you succeeded without one of Daykin's Water Drawers. R. G. WENHAM.
